Fall 2004

REUNION 2004

The 2004 Steel Tigers 77th Armor Association Reunion was held in Louisville, Kentucky and at nearby Fort Knox in July. As always, the reunion provided an opportunity to catch up with friends, old and new, and to meet new people. Although Task Force (TF) 1-77 Armor is currently deployed in Iraq, we were honored to host three active duty members of the Battalion. CPT Mike Panaro, SFC Daniel Gonci, and SSG Ryan Allman were able to join us for the reunion festivities and briefed us on Battalion operations in Iraq and rear detachment operations and SSG Allman provided a glimpse into the life of a soldier in TF 1-77 AR.

Reunion Coordinator James "Sparky" Stafford pulled out all the stops arranging for reunion goers to experience tank simulators and weapons training at Fort Knox. A few men were surprised to see their wives and daughters eagerly trying their hands at firing M16A2 rifles, M249 Squad Automatic Weapons, and M240B machine guns. On game night at Slugger Field, the Louisville Bats invited SSG Allman and Gerry Dubois to throw the first ball of the game (and it must have brought the team luck since the Bats won!). Other reunion highlights included dinner and dancing on the Belle of Louisville and of course, who could forget the Banquet with a surprise visit from Elvis, the Blues Brothers, and Rod Stewart! A VET'S REUNION ANXIETY

The first reunion for 77th Armor Association was held in July 2000. There was another in 2001. Both were in Louisville, Kentucky. I didn't attend either of those. The next was in 2003 in Colorado Springs. I could hardly not attend since it was just 60 miles South of where I live.

I gotta tell ya, I was pretty anxious about what it was going to be like.

I was first contacted by Patricia Johnson in May 2000. She was helping Tom Rosser locate some Army buddies from his time in Vietnam with the 1/77th Armor. I was dazed by the phone conversation with Patricia. So many names and faces and events from so long ago. I hadn't maintained any contact with anyone from my Army days. Patricia was great, but I was still stunned. For some strange reason, I felt like everyone but me was going to have clear, accurate memories from thirty-plus years ago. That worry was put to rest within the first hour of my first reunion.

Did I really want to reassemble those memories from so long ago? I was in the midst of an ugly divorce. I was an emotional basket case, anyway. Was this old Army stuff just going to make matters worse? That and the cost of traveling are why I didn't attend reunions #1 and #2. I wish I had, but maybe I just wasn't ready. Who knows? I did attend reunion #3 and I'm glad I did.

I walked in and saw a bunch of geezers wearing name badges and 77th Armor caps and shirts. I stood there and shouted, "Who the hell are you people and what did you do with the guys I was in Vietnam with?" Not really, but the thought crossed my mind. Everyone was gracious. To my delight, I discovered everyone's memory was just as fuzzy as mine.

The next Steel Tigers Reunion will be held at El Paso, Texas and nearby Fort Bliss, in October 2006. Our reunion coordinator is CSM (USA RET) Joe D. Offutt. He will be assisted by the capable Jean Offutt, who is a Public Information Officer at Fort Bliss.

AN INTERVIEW WITH TOM MILLER

Good morning, Tom. Please tell us a little about yourself.

My name is Tom Miller and I'm a tanker. I served on HQ 66. That's enough.

A little more, please.

I was commissioned through the Reserve Office Training Corps (ROTC) Program in 1953, just weeks before the end of the Korean War. Let's just say that I went to all the Army schools that were appropriate for Armor officers, up through the Army War College. I qualified on every weapon in a tank or armored cavalry unit and I lived for field training and maneuvers. My assignments were spread over troop commands starting with tank and armored cavalry platoons and working up to an armored cavalry squadron in Germany and a tank battalion in Vietnam. Demilitarized Zones seem to be my specialty, as I served there in Vietnam and Korea, and in the inter-zonal boundary in Germany.

Were all your assignments with troops?

No one is that fortunate. My staff jobs were mostly in operations positions, but included maintenance, intelligence, communications, and training. Lots of training. Staff positions included duty with the Armor School, Army Reserve, ROTC, Army National Guard, U.S. Marine Corps, German Army, and the Department of Army. I spent much of my career with American citizen soldiers; they taught me things different from the professional soldier. Finally, in 1984, the Army decided I was too old, and told me to go home after 30 years, 7 months and 19 days.

What was your most interesting assignment?

Without doubt, command of the 1/77th Armor in combat. Never have I been privileged to work with a better-trained unit, or to lead a more dedicated organization of real American soldiers.

Can you think of something fun or dumb that you did in Vietnam?

Yes, probably the least fun and most dumb thing I did in Vietnam was the day I agreed to get out of the Brigade Deputy Commander's perfectly good helicopter and wait by myself for part of our Scout Platoon to come pick me up. We had been flying close to Wunder Beach and had just seen someone armed with an AK-47 run away from a small cooking fire. We lost him in some small bushes where a village used to be. I only had my .45 cal. pistol and it was already dusk when they dropped me off. Let me tell you, I felt mighty alone out there for about 30 minutes until that bunch of Scouts arrived. We found a few pieces of uniforms, equipment, and a little ammo but we never found that man or any of his buddies. I was just glad they didn't look for me while I was walking up and down the beach.

Where do you think our 77th Armor Association stands today?

We are on the brink of becoming a self sustaining organization with a long future. The credit for this goes to our early leaders. I almost hesitate to mention any names because there are too many to list. We started with the efforts of Tom Rosser and Peach. Without them, we would never have existed. Over the years, we have been held together by hard work and long hours put in by Jerry Brown, Bruce Goldsmith, Chuck Winslow, Jim Spiller and the principal organizer of our last and best yet reunion, Jim Stafford. We really could list every volunteer for any position, and we must include our most faithful members who have attended every reunion. That comes up to about forty hardcore members. I give them the credit, and thank them and all the rest I didn't single out.

HQ66 Crew in front of a
M48 Tank

How about our last reunion, was it fun?

I believe everyone present thought so. We had plenty of time to talk about old times, comrades gone and those we still need to find, and to look toward improving for the future. We really enjoyed the companionship, stories, and information the three guys from the active 1/77 Armor brought us from Iraq and the rear base in Schweinfurt, Germany. They made us feel like we still had purpose. We were honored by their presence.

Nicole Dubois, Newsletter Editor, at

We also had opportunities to have hands on fun and games, both with the driver simulators and the gunnery simulators. I noticed that most of the family members took part in the fun. Of course, we ate too much, but it was all good, including the BBQ picnic and the Ohio River Boat Cruise/Dinner. And that band! That was a super topping to end the party! Thank you, Jocko!

Back to Vietnam, what were the orders from on high while you were there?

There were a couple of things that were not necessarily visible to the trooper on the ground. One was the decision that the casualties in Vietnam would be reduced to no more than two hundred a week. Now, I'm not for having casualties in any number but what that meant was we might have the bad guys surrounded and pinned down, really pounding them, but if the casualty count was getting up early in the week, we might be ordered to break contact and return to our bases. That's just dumb; we ended up being shot at by those same bad guys a week later.

Another might just have been my desire to lead the Battalion on the more daring missions. Many of you went on Operation Remagan, the first return to Khe Sahn after the Marines left. The battalion was on other similar task force operations, but never again under our own command. When we went west again with a large force, it was always under the command of the Deputy Brigade Commander. In my opinion, as a ground infantryman, he didn't know all that we tankers could and should have been doing out there. The tanks were moved around too slow, and returned to the same places too often. There was too much looking and not enough recon by fire. I thought it unnecessarily cost too many men and tanks. But that's just my opinion and I understand others may think differently.

What are some of your plans for the Association?

First, we need to do those things necessary to become a viable organization. We need to increase our dues paying membership and learn how to control where and how we spend our money. We also have to improve the services we offer and increase interest among the 77th Armor base from which our members come.

CSM Joe Offutt is working now to make the 2006 reunion in El Paso/Fort Bliss the best yet. For the off year in 2005, we are going to offer opportunities for smaller groups to meet. There will be more said about these activities later. We are checking into alternate funding sources so we can offer more services and have more fun, all without increasing our dues. We are also seeking ways to better serve both us older veterans from times passed, and future 77th Armor Association members now fighting in Iraq. That's just a start. It's going to be a busy two years.

What is the most important thought you want to leave in closing.

That's easy. It is an honor having been selected to lead this great group of men into the future. I pledge you will get the very best I have to offer. You are now my priority. I know that I cannot do this alone, but you have selected a slate of Association Officers and Executive Committee members who will also work their best. And, they will make sure that I stay on the straight and narrow path to the future greatness of our Association. Together, we will succeed.

In closing, I ask every one of you, officer, member, prospect, to help by giving us your suggestions on how to solidify the ranks, improve the product and reach for the stars. Every suggestion will be welcomed and considered. Please, phone, mail, or e-mail me.

Thanks for the opportunity to express myself today.

REPLACEMENT OF MEDALS

Medals awarded while in active service are issued by the individual military services if requested by veterans or by the next of kin of deceased veterans. Army veterans need to send requests through the National Personnel Records Center (NPRC) for verification of awards and the NPRC will forward the request to the appropriate service department for issuance. Requests for replacement of medals should be submitted on Standard Form 180, "Requests Pertaining to Military Records." Forms can be obtained from your County Veteran's Service office by calling 1-800-827-1000 or online at:

www.vba.va.gov/pubs/otherforms.htm

The Steel Tigers Yahoo Group is an informal way to keep in touch with others in the Steel Tigers family. This email group is open to all of the valiant tankers from the 77th Armor Regiment who served so willingly and bravely in WWII, Korea, Vietnam, Kosovo, and who continue to serve in Iraq. Any MOS that served or serves with the 77th may join. The group is also open to the family of those who served or serve in the 77th.

STANDING ON THE SHOULDERS OF GIANTS

Greetings fellow Steel Tigers. I would like to extend my warmest regards to all members of the Steel Tigers and their families from Schweinfurt, Germany, the current home of the 1st Battalion, 77th Armor Regiment. On behalf of SFC Gonci, SSG Allman, and myself, I would also like to express our gratitude for the wonderful weekend we shared with you in Louisville this past July. We were unbelievably touched by your generosity, your camaraderie, and your acceptance of the three of us, as well as your interest in supporting the current Steel Tigers. I feel that we met family during the reunion.

Although your pride in us was evident, I do not think we ever properly expressed how proud we are of you. After meeting a small number of our regiment's veterans, I know that the soldiers currently serving in our battalion are standing on the shoulders of giants. We will continue to stand firm and continue the lineage of which we are all so proud.

SFC Gonci, SSG Allman and CPT Panaro at the 2004 Reunion Banquet

I know that America is a better place because of the soldiers of your generation. This year, we saw an airport full of strangers applaud SSG Allman when it was announced that he was injured in Iraq and that it would take him a moment to board the aircraft. We saw United Airlines upgrade a soldier to business class because he was wearing his DCUs and returning to duty in Iraq. When I think about what Vietnam veterans endured when they returned home, it saddens me, but I also know that the support we now enjoy comes from the fact that veterans and soldiers like you refuse to allow us to be treated so poorly. Please know that we are grateful.

I would also like to encourage the current members of the Steel Tigers to reach out to the veterans of the regiment. This is a wonderful opportunity to forge bonds with the soldiers that served before us. Numerous gentlemen would like to get in touch with soldiers that are currently serving and some would like an opportunity to communicate with soldiers that are doing the same thing they did in Vietnam, for example, the loader on A35, the gunner on C66, and so on and so forth. The 77th Armor Association is also a great way to keep in touch with those brothers that are currently on your left and right. I would encourage all of us to take advantage of it.

CPT Mike Panaro

A FAMILY'S REUNION ANXIETY

When my parents and I arrived at our first Steel Tigers Reunion in 2002, we were a bit unsure what to expect. My mom and I had some rather vague notions of sightseeing in and around Louisville while we left my father to fend for himself among the other "old guys." Although we were grateful Patricia Johnson ("Peach") had located my father, we were a little hesitant about spending an entire week with my dad's Army buddies.

To fully understand our uncertainty, you have to understand that prior to Peach's call my dad never mentioned his time in the Army or in Vietnam. It was not that he was bitter or angry, quite the contrary, he just did not talk about it and did not want to talk about it. The answer to any questions that were asked was usually a calm but final – "I don't really remember. It happened a long time ago."

After Peach located my dad, there were some difficult and amazing months. There had always been questions about his time in Vietnam – especially those last few days – which remained unanswered. He had never pursued answers or had any wish to reconnect to those with whom he served, but the phone calls and emails started the ball rolling. Memories long forgotten filled the first few months after Peach's call; some of them were hilarious, some disturbing, and some are bittersweet in the knowing. We were thankful that Peach had not let my dad hang up, and that in her wonderful and calming way, she opened the door.

But a reunion? The reunion was not a prospect about which we were enthusiastic. We were positive it would be dreadfully boring and uncomfortable but, being a supportive (and nosy) family, we went when my dad said he wanted to go. So imagine our surprise when we walked into a slide show and someone called out "Dubois!?" (in a style only the Army can teach) and my dad actually sat up straighter. Who was this Sparky fellow and why was he so excited to see my father?

Of course, that was just the first of many Twilight Zonesque moments. I learned that my dad helped steal an outhouse and that he was a smart-ass back then too. I heard stories about illegal drinking, spiked "soda," the terrors of elephant grass, "wonderful" Wunder Beach, and so many more. I heard stories I would have paid to hear when I was a teenager; breaking curfew would have been a walk in the park with that type of ammunition!

There were also more serious moments. We asked about what happened on January 15, 1969 and those who were there graciously shared very painful and very emotional memories. Learning how that event had affected so many others was a powerful message about the connectivity of life. The reunion gave us an opportunity to mourn and celebrate together.

Although our first reunion will probably remain our most emotional reunion, each one has been a precious and wonderful experience. They are a time for my father, and now my mom and me, to reunite with friends, to catch up with their families, and

A MESSAGE FROM THE BATALLION COMMANDER

July 11, 2004

To my fellow Steel Tigers,

Every day soldiers of your Regiment follow proudly in the footsteps of the heroes that have gone before them, namely you here today. It is eerie how much our mission resembles that of what you did in Vietnam – convoy security and route clearance, counter rocket patrols, search and destroy missions in the jungle like terrain around Balad and LSA Anaconda.

The Battalion is split up into pieces as well, A Company working in Tikrit with TF 1-18 Infantry, tanks from B Company throughout Salah Ad Din supporting the Brigade wherever needed just as you all did in Vietnam.

I could not be prouder of the soldiers here who suffer through 130 degree heat and unseen attackers who prefer to take us on with mines and improvised explosive devices, remote fired rockets and mortars. We are in contact daily and yet the Steel Tigers take the fight to the enemy with late night raids that catch the vermin in their beds. To date, we have captured or killed more than 400, but war is not without its price.

SGT Lee Todachenee, a Tiger medic, and SPC Richard Trevethick, a combat engineer were killed in April. To date, we have suffered more than 30 wounded as well, to include SSG Ryan Allman who is with you today. SSG Allman represents the best of the Steel Tigers, a scout and warrior whose first concern is always his soldiers and taking care of business. Please pat him and the Rear D folks there on the back for me. Without them, we could not make this happen.

KEEPING WATCH — U.S. Army Sgt. Ryan Allman with the 1st Infantry Division, Logistics Support Area, Anaconda, Iraq, scans the area while conducting a patrol on April, 26, 2004. The area is being cleared of threats so the Tactical Air Control Party can call in an air strike. U.S. Army photo by Staff Sgt. Aaron Allmon II

I will close by simply saying that I have promised my soldiers a 10-year regimental reunion in Las Vegas, and ask that the membership committee consider a request for the 77th Regimental reunion in 2014. God Bless you all.

Blood on the Axe!
LTC David S Hubner Sr.

FALLEN HEROES

They shall not grow old, as we that are left grow old. Age shall not weary them, nor the years condemn. At the going down of the sun, and in the morning, we will remember them.

Army SPC Edgar P. Daclan Jr. 24, of Cypress, California was killed September 10, 2004, by an explosive device as his patrol was responding to indirect fire near Balad, Iraq. Spc. Daclan was assigned to the 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry, 1st Infantry Division, based in Schweinfurt, Germany.

SPC Gregory A. Cox, 21, of Carmichaels, Pennsylvania died September 27, 2004 in Balad, Iraq, when his military vehicle was unintentionally run off the road by a civilian vehicle causing it to rollover. Cox was assigned to 1st Battalion, 77th Armor Regiment, 1st Infantry Division, Schweinfurt, Germany.

SFC Joselito O. Villanueva, 36, of Los Angeles, California died September 27, 2004 in Balad, Iraq, when he was at an observation post and was shot by a sniper. Villanueva was assigned to the 9th Engineer Battalion, 1st Infantry Division, Schweinfurt, Germany.

We lost a Brother. It matters not what the rank, he was a Brother soldier, and he was working with our own 77th Tank Battalion. It matters not that he was an infantryman, he was one of ours. It matters not that he served in a war different from our war, he served on behalf of all of us. Nothing else matters. He was one of our own, and now he is gone and today and tomorrows to come, we will grieve for him.

In no way can we miss him as will his family and loved ones. But, we will indeed miss him, for he was our Brother. He was where we would have been were we only 35 years younger. He could have been our blood brother, or son or nephew. Please join us in asking the Power you hold most high to grant our Brother eternal rest, and to bring peace to his beloved family.

MINUTES OF STEEL TIGER BUSINESS MEETING HELD JULY 17, 2004 AT LOUISVILLE KENTUCKY:

President, Tim O'Neill, opened the meeting with an invocation given by chaplain Jim Spiller, followed by the Pledge of Allegiance.

Reading of the minutes from the last meeting was dispensed with since there were no open items. Approved by show of hands.

Treasurer's Report: Chuck Winslow reported on our finances since the last reunion. Beginning Balance was $10,887.31 + 2003/04 Dues of $2,800 + 2003/04 Reunion Income of $8,822 + Donation of $500 + Merchandise Sales of $635 for a Total of $23,344.31. Fund use consisted of the following: Merchandise 14.60% + Newsletter 2.01% + 2003/04 reunion expense 64.98% + Web Site 15.52%, for a Total of $16,492.80. Our current balance is $6,851.

Jim Stafford and Chuck Winslow discussed some of reasons that some of the activities went over budget. Primary reason was that the number of late, walk-in registrations didn't happen as in previous years. Extra reservations for some of the events were purchased to cover those that registered late; the numbers didn't follow earlier trends.

The treasurer's report was approved pending audit. Bob Elrod, a CPA, volunteered to do the audit. Audit will be done at the end of the calendar year via e-mail

New Business:

Membership and attendance at the reunion were discussed. Attendance this year was down from last year. Some of the reasons discussed were the frequency of them. Some felt that the reunions should occur every other year. It was also suggested that all members not attending the reunion should be contacted.

There was some discussion on how to attract membership from the active 1/77th. It was generally thought that by offering them services and information that in later years the men would join.

The active 1/77th is having a reunion in 2014, at Las Vegas; we all want to be a part of that. It is very important to stay in contact with the unit.

Pete Occhialini noted that he had sent some of his remembrances of Vietnam to our Historian, Bob Rushforth, for inclusion into the unit history. He suggested that we all do the same.

Election of Officers:

The following officers were elected to serve until the next reunion:

President... Tom Miller, Vice President... Mike O'Bryen, Secretary... Chuck Winslow, Treasurer... Bob Basner, Chaplain... Jim Spiller, Historian... Bob Rushforth, Membership... Walt Evans, Judge Advocate... Hap Trainor.

In addition to our previous presidents; Jerry Brown and Tim O'Neill, the following men were elected to the Executive Board: Bruce Goldsmith, Gerry Dubois, Joe Offutt, Jim Stafford, Don Brown and Ed Stewart.

Next Reunion: A motion was made and passed to have the next reunion in 2006. The secretary was charged with getting the constitution wording in line with this decision as soon as possible and present it to the Executive Board. Our new VP is charged with the responsibility to select a reunion date and location and present it to the Board.

Jerry Brown reported on Col. Pickarts' condition and suggested that we appoint a back up for him when representation at events calling for the Col of the Regiment is required. Tom Miller said that the Col of the Regiment is a DA procedure and that a replacement might not be authorized. Both Jerry and Tom will research this for the membership.

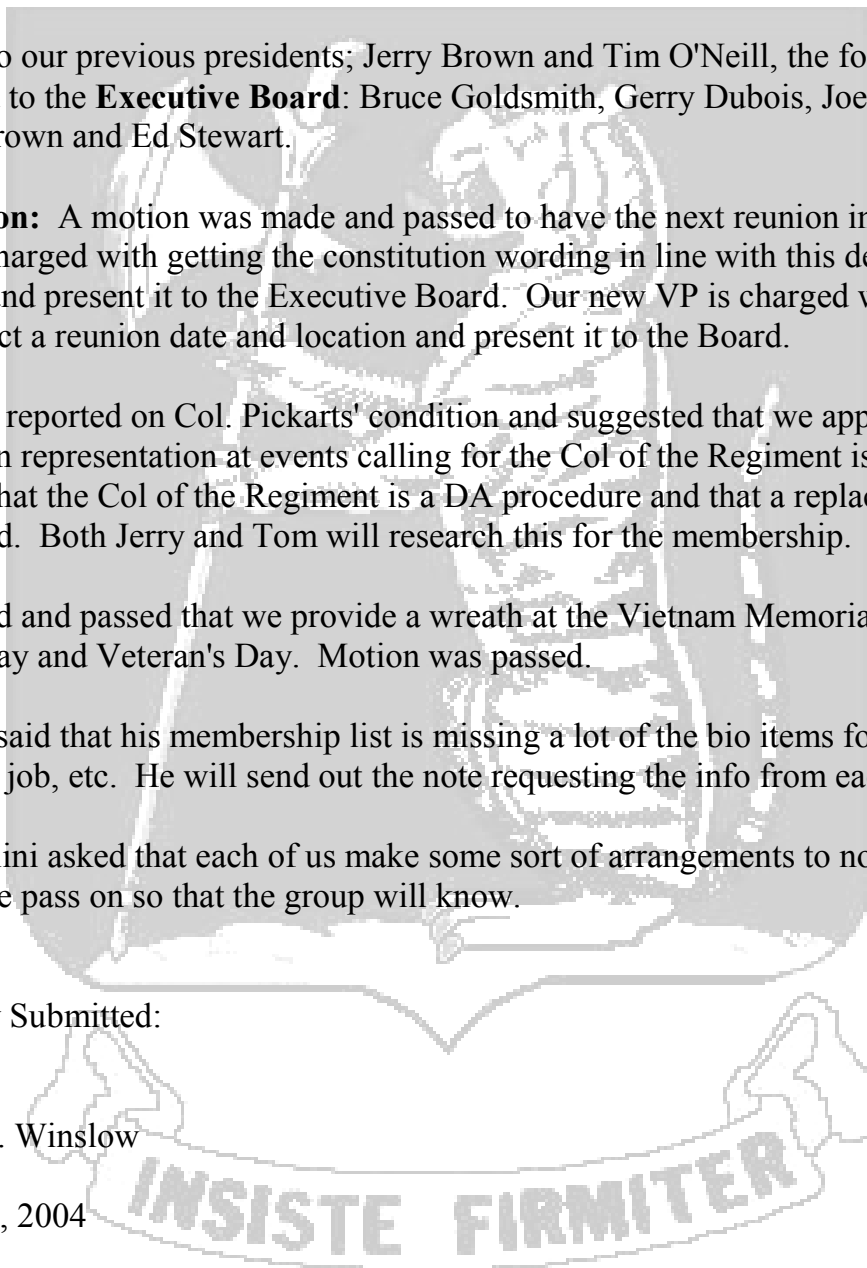

It was moved and passed that we provide a wreath at the Vietnam Memorial Wall for both Memorial Day and Veteran's Day. Motion was passed.

Walt Evans said that his membership list is missing a lot of the bio items for the members such as unit, job, etc. He will send out the note requesting the info from each member.

Pete Occhialini asked that each of us make some sort of arrangements to notify the Association when we pass on so that the group will know.

Respectfully Submitted:

Half the guys had family members along. The fuzzy memories became another bond we shared and the source of more than a few smiles.

Before I arrived that first day, I was worried this was going to be a bunch of crazies, huddled around endlessly telling macho war stories. There's always a little bit of the war stories going around, but that's not what this is about. It's about reconnecting with people. It's about reconstructing the memories that you choose to. "Where did so-and-so go after he left our unit?" "What was the name of the guy who stole the plywood from the Marines?" "Did what's-his-name end up marrying that gal from Ohio?" The group is too large for the whole big group to all sit and talk, so it tends to break up into smaller groups who have something in common.

After a day or two, I warmed up and got more comfortable. Five or six of us were sitting at a table in the bar. I noticed a guy at the bar talking with another vet. He was wearing a vest with all sorts of Vietnam and Army stuff sewn on it. The guy he was talking to left and he got a far away look in his face. He sat there alone at the bar and drank for another 15 or 20 minutes. I got up and asked him when he was with 1/77. He said he wasn't, but he did a tour in Vietnam. Something he said or something in the way he looked told me he felt very alone watching all the 1/77 guys enjoying the evening. I shook his hand and said, "Welcome home, brother. Please join us." He did. We had a nice talk.

We are all brothers. Not because we knew each other incredibly well. In most cases we didn't. We are all brothers because we shared an incredible experience. These reunions are an experience worth sharing. A small group of people put in a tremendous amount of thought and work to make them enjoyable for all.

Editor's Note: Bob also attended the 2004 Reunion

to reminisce about those who live only in memory.

Even months after the 2004 reunion, my parents and I still find ourselves trying to explain and understand why the reunion is such a wonderful experience. There is a poem by Emily Dickinson that reads in part, "We can find no scar, But internal difference, Where the meanings are." This is what I found among the men of the 1/77th; time has healed their scars but they are somehow different, set apart. They have shared events both painful and wonderful that I can never truly be privy to, but in knowing them and in hearing their stories, my life is richer.

The men of the 1/77th fought together, shed blood together, mourned together, laughed together, and are now healing their last remaining wounds together. They are a band of brothers. And I am grateful to be part of the family for one very special week each year.
